

Dr. Lynne Kiesling

Lynne Kiesling is an Associate Professor in the Department of Economics at Purdue University, and is the Associate Director of the Purdue University Research Center in Economics. She was recently an Associate Professor of Instruction in the Department of Economics at Northwestern University, where she was also Director of the Electricity Policy Program in the Searle Center on Law, Regulation, and Economic Growth. Her research examines the interaction of market design and innovation in the development of retail markets, products and services and the economics of “smart grid” technologies. She has served as a peer reviewer for the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Science Foundation, and for academic journals including Energy Journal, Public Choice, Review of Economics and Statistics, and Energy Policy, and has served as a member of the GridWise Architecture Council. She has a B.S. in Economics from Miami University and a Ph.D. in Economics from Northwestern University.